jigiya so, west africa

Goal $15,000

A single, female missionary associate from NC has just launched Jigiya So, a new platform at The Hub in West Africa. The Hub is a Live Dead training center in West Africa that exists to church plant among UPGs through teams, and Jigiya So, or 'place of hope' works with young marginalized boys who are enslaved in a system that has them begging on the streets of the capital city. Jigiya So provides hot meals, basic teaching on personal hygiene + first aid, but is most actively pursuing making disciples of these boys by introducing them to God through Bible stories and thought provoking discussions on the nature of God. The vast majority of these boys have had no education, so we aspire to connect each boy with a tradesman through an apprenticeship so that when these children cease begging they can support themselves. Funds given to this platform would help enormously to get fully equipped + provide supplies until we are fully self-sustainable. This looks like setting up a room at our center for first-aid (examining table and medical supplies), fund the feeding program and purchase basic personal hygiene items for the boys, as well as providing equipment such as carpentry tools or a sewing machine for a trade apprenticeship.

women in ministry

SIS - Scholarship for International Students $1,050

For the past two years, we have sponsored Rukia Llaka, a non-traditional student at Evangelical Theological College in Tirana, Albania. This June, she graduated from the two-year program in Christian Ministry. She is continuing this year in the third year program for missions and will be a resident student. Her family background is nominally Muslim. Yet, at age 40, she accepted Jesus as the Lord and Savior of her life. As her life changed completely, her four children and her mother came to faith in Christ. Rukie is divorced and in her mid-fifties, and her ex-husband has spent many years in prison due to his criminal past. She prays that God will use all of her life experiences to help her humbly serve Him. She plans to minister to women who have suffered domestic violence and/or divorce. She also hopes to open a food center to serve poor children at least one daily meal. We want to continue to bless Rukie and further her education as God redeems all her life experiences for His glory!
